Trailblazer 4-H Members Share Livestock and Pets with Seniors at Crellin Community Center

Members of the Trailblazer 4-H Club brought smiles and furry friends to the Crellin Community Center today as they proudly displayed their livestock projects and pets to local senior citizens following lunch.

The event offered a special opportunity for intergenerational connection, as the 4-H youth showcased animals they've raised with care and dedication—ranging from goats and rabbits to chickens and beloved pets. The seniors enjoyed meeting the animals up close and chatting with the young handlers about their experiences in agriculture and animal care.

“This is one of our favorite ways to give back,” said one Trailblazer member. “The seniors have so many great stories, and it’s fun to share our animals with them.”

The Trailblazer 4-H group continues to focus on community involvement, agriculture education, and developing strong youth leadership through hands-on learning experiences like today’s visit.
